Course Description: This course is designed to strengthen students' skills in reasoning about problems and issues of everyday life by helping them to distinguish between good and bad arguments. Students work to achieve these goals through reading and discussion of course materials. Some of the topics to be considered include the structure of inductive arguments, rhetorical fallacies, and the connection between logic and belief. The second half of this course will stress information literacy, developing critical thinking skills necessary for each. Topics will include television and print media reports, advertising, maps and the internet. Throughout the course, the student will develop the skills necessary to become a better consumer of information.

Learning Objectives: Throughout this course, the student will learn to:

- Develop and demonstrate the ability to recognize logical consistency, following deductive as well as inductive patterns, in both oral and written discourse;
- Develop and demonstrate the ability to separate fact from mere opinion in a variety of argumentative contexts;
- Develop and demonstrate the ability to follow logically valid conclusions from raw data;
- Develop and demonstrate the ability to organize evidence and arguments in a persuasive manner, both orally and in writing;
- Acquire skills in problem-solving strategies, specifically in the adaptation of oral and written communication to specific audiences and for specific purposes

Evaluation:

One major point of evaluation—which will consist of a 5-7 page paper and a short oral presentation—I will call the 'media project.' The media project is designed to provide the student with application of some of the skills learned throughout the semester by, critically analyzing rhetorical or persuasive methods in media reports or advertising (amongst other information sources). Guidelines for this assignment will be announced. In addition, there will be two exams given during the regularly scheduled class time (dates subject to change):

- ◆ Midterm Exam: September 29, 2 – 3:15 PM
- ◆ Final Exam: May 5, 2 – 4 PM

Anyone who cannot take either exam must make arrangements to make it up at least one week prior to the scheduled exam date. Failure to do so will result in a grade of "F" for that exam.

The following weighting will be used to calculate your grade:

Attendance and Participation	20%
Midterm Exam	20%
Media Project	30%
Final Exam	30%

Note on Academic Dishonesty: Plagiarism is the ultimate mortal sin of academia. Please, cite properly and document accordingly anything that may appear in your written work for this class. If you are unclear about how to properly document a paper, simply ask me. But err on the side of caution: clear-cut cases of plagiarism (deemed so by myself) will result in the possibility of up to and including a “F” for this class, and possible disciplinary action taken. Don't try me, I will catch you. All submissions for this class will be cleared through electronic methods to detect plagiarism.

If you are unsure of what plagiarism constitutes, I highly recommend you view the tutorial at the following link: <http://www.cte.usf.edu/plagiarism/plagindex.html>. Ignorance of the law, as they say, is no excuse.

Note on Attendance: Your attendance in class and participation in the classroom are a sizeable chunk of your final grade. For the purposes of this grade, there is no difference between an “excused” and “unexcused” absence. If you do not show up, read the assigned material, and participate in discussion of the issues covered, you will not do well in this class. I reserve the right to administratively withdraw any student who misses more than 50% of the scheduled class meetings at any point in the semester. Should this fall after March 1st, you will receive a “WF.”

Students with Disabilities: I will be happy to provide reasonable accommodations to students with disabilities. Feel free to self-disclose to me privately any disability that may present challenges for you in the course. I request that you contact the Office of Disability Services (678-839-6428) before you request special accommodations.

Expectations, Suggestions and Mandates for an efficient class:

1. Please arrive to class on time and expect to stay the entire duration of the class. If this is an impossibility, please make every attempt to notify me in advance of tardiness or absence.
2. Especially true in philosophy more than most other areas of study, diligence is important. The difficulty of the subject is indirectly proportional to the amount of work put into the course. Expect to have up to five hours a week of reading and practice in order to get an "A" for the course. Additionally, for these reasons, attendance is of vital importance.
3. Please come to class prepared (i.e., any reading assigned read, any questions concerning exercises or lectures prepared, etc.)
4. Please be respectful of each other in the class. There will be times when students disagree about a topic discussed in class. This is a didactic process, not a combative one.
5. Due to the great excess of material and limited time in which we must cover, please do not create a disruption for those people who are attempting to learn. Disruptions include blurting out answers, name calling, chiding each other, snoring, etc. Laughing at the Instructor's jokes is obviously exempted from this policy. In addition, personal audio devices (except those in use to record lectures) and loud crunching snack foods are prohibited from the classroom. PLEASE TURN OFF your cellphones in class.
6. Please feel free to make mistakes. We all will from time to time, even your omniscient instructor.
7. Please feel free to make use of my office hours. Waiting until the last moment in the semester to catch up is not advisable. I am excellent at fixing small problems, but horrendous at fixing large ones. The only difference between small and large problems is time.
8. This is a discussion-based class, and your effective participation is a part of your final grade. “Effective” participation is a function of the quality, not the quantity, of one's overall participation in class. Thus, if you find yourself someone who is naturally reticent, please make an effort to participate and have your voice heard; likewise if you find yourself someone who is naturally garrulous, please allow others to be heard.
9. Have fun! The material is only as dry as you make it out to be. Sharpening one's mind can be an exhilarating process.
